

Protecting privacy. Promoting transparency.

OIPC Promotes Open Data Literacy and Leadership for Right to Know Week

---

VICTORIA—In celebration of Right to Know Week 2012, the Office of the Information and Privacy Commissioner is promoting open data literacy and leadership among B.C.'s librarians and information professionals.

The first-ever Open Data Learning Summit, organized by the OIPC, BC Libraries Cooperative and the Libraries and Literacy division of the Ministry of Education, will take place on Friday, September 21 from 9am to 4:30pm at UBC Robson Square.

The event will feature engaging speakers, including a welcome from Commissioner Elizabeth Denham and a keynote address by David Eaves, open activist and blogger at eaves.ca. and how-to presentations, and will offer moderated discussion of open data best practices, open data storytelling, and open data leadership. All knowledge levels are welcome.

For more information, visit: <http://open.libraries.com>.

Register online at <http://opendatasummit.eventbrite.ca>.